EASTERN STAR GIVES

ANNUAL NEW YEAR HOP

Largely and brilliant was the annual New Year hop of the Connellsville Order of the Eastern Star held last evening in the state armory under the committee of Mrs. P. R. Wolmer, Mrs. W. R. Scott and Miss Rebecca Sauter. The affair is one of the leading social events of the Christmas season and is looked forward to with much interest by Connellsville society. About two hundred and twenty-five guests were present and movement reigned supreme from 8:30 o'clock until 1 o'clock this morning. Those who tried not to dance spent a very enjoyable evening at cards. The floor was in excellent condition for dancing and the music by Kiefer's orchestra was never better. The dance was perfect in all its appointments, not the smallest detail in arrangements being overlooked by the committee in charge. During an intermission a lap luncheon was served. Out of town guests were from Uniontown, Scottsdale, Greensburg, Mount Pleasant, Dawson and other surrounding towns.

Annual Holiday Assembly.

One of the most brilliant social functions of the Christmas season in Uniontown was the annual holiday assembly of the Laurel club held last evening. Two hundred and twenty-five guests, including many visitors who are spending the holiday season in Uniontown, and the school set home for the holidays, were present. The decorations were unusually elaborate. In the center of the ball room floor a group of palms surrounded a pedestal fountain that played over a golden ball of electric lights. Directly above hung a large cluster of southern smilax from which glowed many red lights. Cluster festoons of smilax radiated to all parts of the room practically concealing the ceiling and transforming the ball room into an immense bower. Refreshments were served in abundance. Dancing began at 9 o'clock and continued until 3 o'clock this morning. Among the out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. John P. Kephart of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Goldsmith, J. Donald Reid and H. Dana Wright of Connellsville and Harry McDonald of Dawson.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement of Miss Ruth Shaw and James B. Siler, both of Meigsdale, was announced at a beautifully appointed afternoon bridge party given by Miss Helen Shaw Thursday at her home at Meigsdale. No date has been set for the wedding but it is expected it will be an early spring affair.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR!

The Courier sincerely wishes that 1922 will be the happiest year you have ever known and also be fruitful in all those things that will make you glad and proud of what you will write into its record.

YOUR PART IN CITY ADMINISTRATION.

The inauguration of a new city government ought to be of proportionately as much interest to the citizens of Connelville as the inauguration of a governor is of interest to the people of the state.

The ceremony attending the induction of the new officials has nothing of show or display about it but its very simplicity should make it impressive. The persons taking office merely pledge themselves by the oath by which they subscribe to discharge their duties honestly and faithfully. The circumstances under which this oath is administered should be of such character that the import of the obligation is understood by the subscribers to it and they are brought to realize the responsibility they are assuming. If, therefore, a large number of interested citizens present the occasion will become much more impressive than if the oath is perfunctorily administered in the presence of but a few people. At the same time those present will be made to feel that they, too, have a share of responsibility in the government of the city.

It all too frequently happens that after new officials have been elected the people forget that they have been chosen as public servants for the purpose of executing the will of the voters on matters and things of interest and concern to them. Those officials are allowed to go ahead in the discharge of their duties without hint or suggestion from the people and often without the display of any interest in what they do or how they do it. Being thus without knowledge of what the people desire to have done mistakes are made and immediately the public begins to censure and blame the officials.

Local government can be made more efficient by the people maintaining a lively interest in all that is done and to such an extent that the officials will never be at a loss to know public sentiment on various issues. There is no better place to begin this show of interest than at the inauguration of a new administration. Your presence there will be notice to the incoming officials that you propose to keep close watch upon all public matters and it will also indicate to the officials that you will be ready and willing to aid in any reasonable and proper manner in making government of Connelville all that it should be as a means of promoting the welfare of all its people.

You are really obligated to do these things whether you attend the inauguration next Monday or stay away from it, but by being present you will have afforded an example to other citizens and shown that you have an appreciation of the joint responsibility resting upon the administration and the citizens.

Tomorrow being the first Sunday as well as the first day of the New Year you will no doubt feel that you simply cannot stay away from church.

Nothing would better suit the purpose of some Democrats than for Senator Crow to stay out of the Senatorial campaign.

The French delegates at the arms conference are due to discover that the "if we can't win we won't play" attitude does not win other trophies or applause for the player.

Making New Year's resolutions may help some but doing things with resolution will be better.

1922 ELECTIONS

Claude A. Swanson, Virginia.
Farrington, Florida.
Democrats Can't Retain All Their Seats.

It will be observed that of these Senatorial seats to be filled during the coming year, 17 are now Republican and 15 Democratic. Inasmuch as the present Republican majority is 24, it is clear that to win the Senate away from the Republicans, it would be necessary for the Democrats in the first place, to hold all the seats they now have and, in the second place, win 13 seats now held by Republicans. As to whether the Democrats are likely to accomplish this, it is now so early, of course, as to make it impossible to say anything having any greater value or interest than merely the broadest speculation.

If one were to try to answer the question whether the Democrats are likely to win the Senate, it would not be possible at the present time to go further than to say that the thing is extremely improbable. Perhaps it would be more accurate to say it is practically impossible. In fact for the purpose of winning control of the Senate the Democrats are this year in a rather unusually weak position. To a less degree than is commonly the case can they count on the "Solid South." Among the 15 seats now held by the Democrats only five are in those dependably Democratic Southern states where the party can always count with complete confidence on electing their candidates. These five are Virginia, Mississippi, Florida, Texas and Tennessee. In truth, stating it this way rather gives the Democrats the benefit of the doubt, for one of these states, Tennessee, went so strikingly Republican last year that it is a question whether it may not now on be more accurately classified with the states which for purposes of political classification are called border or doubtful states.

The 10 other seats now held by Democrats are in states which, for the most part cannot by any means be called safely Democratic. Rhode Island, Nebraska, Wyoming, Utah, Montana, Missouri, Nevada, Ohio, Arizona and New Mexico are states which, in one degree or another, are as likely to go Republican as Democratic. In fact, as to a few of these states, especially Wyoming, Utah, and Rhode Island, it can probably be said that their present appearance on the Democratic side of the Senate list is due more to the extraordinary Wilson strength in 1918 than to normal political conditions. The net of it is that the Democrats cannot reasonably expect to retain all of their 15 seats that came up in the election in 1922.

As to the 17 seats now held by Republicans which came up in the elections this year, at least six are in states in which Democratic success in the past has been so rare that they can almost be considered as the Republican equivalent of the "Solid South." It is not normally to be expected that the Republicans should lose states like Vermont, Maine, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Minnesota, and Wisconsin. It is hardly possible for the Republicans to lose senatorships in two of these states, Minnesota and Wisconsin, but it is unlikely. The other four are always counted upon as "reliable" Republican seats. As to the eleven other seats now held by Republicans, it would be in one degree or another possible for the Democrats to win them. It is always a chance whether the Republicans or the Democrats carry such states, for example, as New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, Connecticut, and West Virginia.

The net of it all is that it is almost a practical impossibility for the Democrats to take the control of the Senate away from the Republicans this year. Only an unparalleled landslide could accomplish it. The Democratic party managers know this and do not count on that particular kind of victory. What they do hope for with a confidence quite justified by the conditions, is to make marked gains in the Senate and to get the psychological benefits of such gains. They especially hope to win away a few of the seats held by conspicuous Republican leaders.

(To be continued Monday)

THE OLD YEAR.
I heard the old year talking, and he seemed to say to me:
"I'm what mankind has made me, and I don't want to be
I did not bring the failures, my days were bright and now
I was the time allotted—the work was man's to do.

"I am what others made me, I had no will or choice.
Through all the days of trial I was not given a voice.
If victory came, man earned it—his was the faith and power;
If sorrow came, God won it—I furnished but the hour.

"I came here empty-handed, a year that was to be,
And what I am in passing mankind has made of me.
I am their past failures, their glory, their sin and sinners;
I am their soul's advancement, their shame and happiness.

"I was not born in evil nor governed by the stars,
I brought to none high honors, to others low degrees;
Only my day, were numbered, I was the time for toil,
And each low road the harvest as he has sown the soil.

"I am what men have made me, not what I hoped to be,
And shall be the New Year which shall follow me,
Our days are used as well as each man's, for we are all one,
For you are in me but the words on which men write their lives.

HEY, OLD MAN, LET ME SHOW YOU HOW TO DO IT.
